

Crab

Crabs are a type of arthropod. This scientific name comes from the ancient Greek language, "arthro" for join, and "pod" for feet or legs.

Crabs and other arthropods have hard skeletons on the outside of their body, exoskeletons, and use their flexible joints to help them move.

